ALLIED POWERS JOIN IN ADVISING PEACE FOR CHINA

Memorandum Deploing Civil War Presented To President Hsu Shih-chang

ALSO TO CANTON

American, British, French, Japanese And Italian Governments R-presented

NO INTERVENTION

Make Clear They Will Let China Decide Conditions For Itself

(CHINA PRESS OWN SERVICE)

Peking, December 2.—The French, American, British, Italian and Japanese Ministers, received in audience by President Hsu Shih-chang this afternoon, presented an aide memoire on behalf of their governments: deploring the civil strife in China, commending the President for his efforts and urging unity in the country. The text of the memorandum follows:

"With grave concern the governments of France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan and the United States of America have witnessed the continued civil strife, which during the past two years has divided the country. This division proved no less harmful to foreign interests than disastrous to the welfare of China.

The consequent unrest has encouraged the enemy and during the supreme crisis of the war has hampered effective co-operation of China with her Allies.

Part Of World Peace Hope

"Now that this crisis is past, the nations are looking forward to the hope of effecting a reorganization of the world for the realization of peace and justice among all peoples.

The division still prevailing in China makes this task more difficult.

The associated governments have observed with hopefulness the steps already taken by the President of the Republic of China with the view of settlement of civil strife and the associated governments are happy to believe that the attitude of the Southern leaders indicates an equal desire to arrive at an amicable adjustment of differences.

"Therefore, the associated governments take occasion to express the sympathy and hopefulness with which they regard indications of desire of both the Peking Government and Southern party leaders to waive merely personal sentiments and local technicalities and, while refraining carefully from taking any step which might be an obstacle to peace, seek without delay, by frank conference, some means of attaining reconciliation upon the basis of law and devotion to interests of the Chinese nation such as necessary to ensure to China both peace and unity within her borders.

Not Intended To Intervene

"In taking occasion to express earnest sympathy with the efforts of both sides to achieve solution of the difficulties that hitherto have divided them, the associated governments desire to make clear that thereby they contemplate no ulterior plan of intervention and no desire to control or influence any particular terms of adjustment which must remain for the Chinese themselves to arrange.

"The associated governments desire only to lend the most possible encouragement to the aspirations and efforts of both parties for the reconciliation and reunion which will benefit the Chinese nation to hear more worthy of its traditions its part in the reconstruction which the nations of the world are now hoping to attain."

The memorandum was sent to Canton simultaneously with its presentation to President Hsu Shih-chang.

Similar Memoire To Canton

(Reuter's Pacific Service) Peking, December 2.—The representatives of Great Britain, America, France, Japan and Italy were today received in audience by President Hsu Shih-chang and presented an aide memoire.

The Allied Consuls in Canton are simultaneously presenting an aide memoire to the Canton Government, with a verbal intimation that the proceeding in no sense implies recognition of the independence of the Southern Government.

Semenoff Again Breaks Out As Siberian Stormy Petrel

His Challenge To Admiral Koltchak In Keeping With His Whole Peppery Career

By Olive Gilbreath (Special Correspondence)

Vladivostok, November 27.—The present declared hostility of Semenov toward Admiral Koltchak and the Alamea's refusal to acknowledge the authority of the new dictator of Siberia establishes once for all Semenov as the "scrapper" of Siberia. He has been from the beginning the one open terror of the Bolsheviks and is, doubtless, building up a history which will send him down to posterity as a legendary hero. The Czech-Slovaks he accepted, but he refused General Horvath's claim to dictatorship and now, with the ex-Balkans Cosacks at his back, he has once again set his hand against the powers that be, represented by Koltchak and the Ministerium.

Semenoff is a hard man to subordinate but the present struggle has its roots deeper than is apparent. In fact, it is the flowering of a seed planted half a year ago, the Spring of 1918, and for those who knew of the incident then, it is a very interesting clash and entirely in character with the fighting Alamea.

Admiral Koltchak, as Shanghai, which saw him, doubtless recalls, was the head of the Black Sea fleet under the unfortunate Nicholas. When his fleet went over to the Bolsheviks he escaped the worse fate of the Baltic officers who were put through the ice, fled across Siberia, and offered his services to England. He was accepted and ordered to Mesopotamia. He sailed from Shanghai in March, had the honor of being held up in Hongkong harbor while the British authorities sat on the case, was admitted and finally reached Singapore. By the time he reached Singapore, however, the political sky in the North had shifted its clouds a bit and he was signaled to return. Instead of proceeding to India he turned back from Singapore to Harbin and there in Harbin came the clash with Semenov.

History might be written amazingly different if leaders were not men but highly specialized machines or gods of the machine. At this time, the Spring of 1918, Semenov was already chief Bolshevik chaser in ex-Balkans and a good one. He had a motley of Chinese hunghutes, Burials, Cosacks and two hundred and fifty tall, black Servians, three years exiled from home and out to kill, which gave the Bolshevik nightmares of a highly satisfactory order. With a little foreign backing, he might have done wonders. But that is another story and the present story concerns only the mix-up between Admiral Koltchak and Semenov's sensibilities, not a distant ancestor to the present difficulty. One might have expected the Admiral of the Black Sea fleet to be long on etiquette but the lack of this quality was wherein the trouble lay. At least, the etiquette of the powers that held at Harbin at that time seemed not to apply to Cosack Alameas.

When the tentative new government in Harbin had decided that Semenov, who was pursuing Bolsheviks at his own dictates and in his own way, must be subordinated, a telegram was despatched to Semenov's chief officer at Manchuria announcing the arrival of Admiral Koltchak by a special train on a certain day and ordering the official to report when the train pulled.

PLAYWRIGHT ROSTAND DIES OF INFLUENZA

Author Of 'Cyrano de Bergerac' And 'Chantecler' Passes Away In France

(French Wireless)

Lyons, December 2.—M. Edmond Rostand, member of the French Academy, died on Monday from an attack of influenza from which he had been suffering for some days.

Edmond Rostand was born in Marseilles on April 1, 1869, and was the son of Joseph Eugene Horbert Rostand, an eminent journalist and economist of that place. He was educated at the Lycée de Marseilles and the College Stanislas and his writings, parts of which have been translated into nearly every European language, are chiefly known for his half-dozen dramatic productions and some of his poems.

Others of Rostand's works, notably 'L'Aiglon' and 'La Samaritaine', brought him fame and material return but it is by his 'Cyrano de Bergerac', the "burlesque comedy" by which he lifted the almost forgotten poet-soldier of that name to a comradeship with the beloved vagabond Villon, that the dramatist is best known. 'Cyrano' was produced on December 28, 1897, in the Theater de la Porte Saint-Martin, with the famous Coquelin in the title role. It was an immediate and tremendous success, the greatest since Hugo's 'Hernani', and was quickly translated into English, Russian, German and other languages. Rostand's first play was a burlesque, 'Les Romanesques', produced in 1894 at the Theater Francaise. This was followed by 'La Princesse Lointaine', brought out at the Theater de la Renaissance in 1895 and having as its basis the story of the troubador Rudel and the Lady of Tripoli. Sarah Bernhardt created the role of Melisande in this play and also in Rostand's next production, 'La Samaritaine', first played at the Theater de la Renaissance in the spring of 1897. 'Cyrano' followed, and the next dramatic work appeared in 1900 when 'L'Aiglon' was brought out by Sarah Bernhardt at her own theater. Rostand's last effort of note was the fantastic 'Chantecler', produced in 1910, but it was generally accepted as having less merit than any of his previous dramatic offerings.

Rostand was elected to the French Academy in 1902, and his wife, who was Rosemonde Etienne Gerard, had published a volume of verse, 'Les Pipeaux', which gained the approval of the Academy. Rostand's poems include 'Les Musardes', 'Pour la Grece', 'Un Soir a Hernani', 'Les Mots', 'Le Cantique de l'Alie', and 'Le Printemps de l'Alie'.

GERMANS CARRYING OUT TRUCE TERMS ON SEA

Surrender Of Warships Nearly Completed And Last Of U-Boats Are On Way

(French Wireless)

Berlin, December 2.—(Via Nauen and Koulkaza). It is stated by a competent authority that the surrender of the warships which are to be interned has been finished except for the battleship Koenig, the small cruiser Dresden and a torpedo-boat. These will be taken to England at the beginning of December.

The sixth and last detachment of submarines put to sea from Heligoland on November 29. With these there have been delivered in all 122 submarines. With this detachment also sailed a steamer which carried the torpedoes which were still to be delivered.

In the Baltic the clearing away of mines and of barriers is in progress. The Great Belt as well as the Sound can be passed without the help of pilots. Accordingly the routes in the Baltic are free and the conditions of the armistice have been fulfilled in this respect. Transports also in the Baltic are now being organized. Coal steamers coming from Petrograd were, on their return, included among these. It is hoped that within the next fourteen days transportation from Finland and Revel can be carried out. Transportation from Libau will then follow, which will take a longer time.

A special commission of navigation experts on both sides will regulate these questions under Article 36 of the armistice conditions. These questions concern the return of the merchant ships belonging to the Entente which are at present in the hands of Germany. These ships are to be given back without any right to recompense. The Navigation Committee of the Entente, which is to treat concerning the clauses of the armistice agreement which concern navigation, has not yet appeared at this account a protest has been made that a matter which is of so urgent importance for the German people is further delayed because the negotiations are still postponed.

Paris, December 1.—President Poincare's stirring declaration at the great banquet at the Elysee, in which he said: "we are united for ever," marks the consummation of the alliance between Great Britain and France in their future policy of upholding the cause of peace and freedom in Europe.

King George and his popular sons won the hearts of Paris through their frank good humor. The final leave taking was of the most cordial character. After his departure King George sent a message to President Poincare, stating that the bonds which unite the two nations henceforth are indissoluble, enabling them to enjoy securely the benefits of peace. President Poincare answered stating that the cordial alliance which had enabled them to defeat German imperialism would be maintained.

WILSON IN SPEECH REVIEWS AMERICAN WAR ACHIEVEMENT

Message To Congress Discusses Nation's Contribution To Allied Victory

SUPREME UNITY

Country's Whole Resources Organised Perfectly Behind Men In Field

PRAISE FOR TROOPS

Proud To Be Fellow-Countryman Of Men Of Such Valor

(American Wireless To Reuter)

Washington, December 2.—(Received at French Wireless Station).—President Wilson addressed a joint session of the Houses of Congress today as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Congress: The year that has elapsed since last I appeared before you to fulfill my constitutional duty to give Congress information of the state of the union has been so crowded with great events, great processes and great results that I cannot hope to give you an adequate picture of its transactions or far-reaching changes which have been brought in the life of the nation and of the world. You have witnessed these things, as I know. It is too soon to assess them and we who stand in the midst of them and a part of them are less qualified than another generation will be to say what they mean or even what they have been. But there stand out facts which are unmistakable and with which it is our duty to deal. To state them is to set the stage for legislative and executive action which must grow out of them and which we have yet to shape and determine.

How Troops Went Over

"A year ago we had sent 149,918 men overseas. Since then we have sent 1,990,313, an average of 162,942 each month, the number in fact rising in May last to 249,997. In June to 278,760 and in July to 307,182, continuing to reach similar figures in August and September—August, 299,970; September, 297,438.

"No such movement of troops ever took place before across three thousand miles of sea, followed by adequate equipment and supplies carried safely through extraordinary dangers and attacks which were alike strange and infinitely difficult to guard against. In all this movement only 768 men were lost by enemy attacks, 630 of whom were on an English transport sunk near the Orkney Islands.

"I need not tell you what lay back of this great movement. Back of it lay a supporting organization of the industries of the country and all its productive activities more complete, more spirited and more thorough in methods and effective in results than any other great belligerent has ever been able to effect. We profited greatly by the example and experiences of the nations which already had been engaged for nearly three years in the exigent and exacting business, every resource, every efficiency, every proficiency taxed to the utmost. We were pupils. But we learned quickly and acted with promptness and readiness in co-operation that justify our great pride that we were able to serve the world with unparalleled energy and quick accomplishment.

Praise Of Men In Field

"But it is not on the physical scale of executive efficiency and preparation of supply and equipment and despatch that I wish to dwell upon but the mettle and quality of the officers and men we sent over and the sailors who kept the sea and the spirit of the nation that stood behind them. No soldiers or sailors ever proved themselves more quickly ready for the test of battle or acquitted themselves with more splendid courage and achievement when put to the test. Those who played some part in directing the great progress by which the war was pushed irresistibly forward to final triumph may never forget all that delight our thoughts with the story of what our men did. There are the officers, who understood the exacting task they had undertaken and performed it with audacity, efficiency and unhesitating courage and imperishable distinction, from their chiefs, Pershing and Sims, down to the youngest lieutenant. And their men were worthy of them, such men as hardly need be commanded and go to their terrible adventure blithely and with quickness and intelligence; those who know just what their strength would accomplish.

"I am proud to be a fellow-countryman of men of such stuff and valor. Those of us who stayed at home did our duty. The war could not be won or the gallant men who fought it given their opportunity to win it otherwise, but for many a long day we shall think ourselves 'Accursed we were not there and hold our manhood's cheap while any speaks that fought' with those at St. Mihiel or Chateau-Thierry."

TALKS ON IMAGINATION IN ENGINEERING WORK

Mr. Oesterblom Reads Paper Before Society On Psychological Factor In Profession

Mr. I. Oesterblom read a paper before the members of the Engineering Society of China last evening on "Imagination as an Important Factor in Progressive Engineering."

After a very comprehensive definition of engineering, endeavoring to include all essential creations of man in a concrete sense, Mr. Oesterblom developed the idea that all these creations had taken definite form only after they had first existed as visions in the minds of inventors and engineers. These inventors and engineers were to be considered as dreamers in the truest sense but the reputation of these useful and constructive dreamers had in part been destroyed through activities of other dreamers whose correct position was not properly understood. Thus the artistic dreamers have their distinct value through placing the realities of human life clearly before the people in a manner which would strongly appeal to the human emotions. The dreamers were distinctly different although each had its place in the world. A third class, the selfish dreamers, was also referred to.

The speaker argued not only that people should distinguish between various classes of visionaries, but that imagination in general and particularly in the engineering schools should be given greater freedom and even be systematically developed by definite studies and likewise definite application. Only by doing so could the engineers fill the positions which rightly belong to them as leaders of constructive human endeavors.

MR. R. D. BUNN SAILS FOR JAPAN ON KOKURA MARU

The following is a certified copy of an affidavit filed by Mr. R. D. Bunn, in the case of Extra v. Meriman in the U. S. Court for China on Saturday, November 30, 1918:

In the United States Court for China.

Cause No. 701
Judah I. Extra, Civil No. 226
Plaintiff, AFFIDAVIT
vs. Filed at Shanghai,
W. L. Meriman, China,
November 30, 1918,
Defendant. William A. Chapman,
Acting Clerk.

United States of America Extrajudicial Jurisdiction in China Consular District of Shanghai (NS):
R. D. Bunn, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:
That he has been subpoenaed to appear before the United States Court for China at 9:30 in the forenoon of November 30, 1918, there to be examined de bene esse on the part of the plaintiff in the above entitled action.

That it was his intention to leave Shanghai, China, on a voyage to sea on Saturday, November 30, 1918, bound for the Empire of Japan, as alleged in the affidavit of A. D. Gibbs, Esquire, filed November 29, 1918, but that he has abandoned his intention of leaving Shanghai for a voyage to sea and that it is not his present intention to go more than one hundred miles beyond Shanghai, China.

(Sgd.) R. D. BUNN.
Subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me at Shanghai, China, this 30th day of November, 1918.

(Sgd.) William A. Chapman, Acting Clerk.
Yesterday morning Mr. Bunn departed for Yokohama on the s.s. Kokura Maru. It will be remembered that counsel for plaintiff stated to the Court that Mr. Bunn's affidavit with the word "present" interlined in ink before the word intention, "was obviously a mere subterfuge calculated to enable the witness to grapple with the Court by changing his mind five minutes after leaving the Court and sailing on the same or the next boat."

Much Ado About An Anthem

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, December 2.—Considerable friction has occurred in Siberia on several occasions regarding the anthem which should be adopted as the national hymn.

This was once a burning question in Vladivostok, and during the Omak celebrations it caused a political disturbance, while in Peking at the celebrations of the Allied victory no one knew what to play in honor of Russia, decision finally resting with the bands, which selected the air they knew best.

The Russian Legation appears to have solved the difficulty by suggesting to the Omak Government the temporary adoption of "Kolslaven," which was the National Anthem of Russia prior to the introduction of "God save the Tsar." The Omak Government has approved this proposal and henceforth "Kolslaven" will prevail in regions under the control of the Omak Government.

Details Of Peking Celebration

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, November 28.—There can be no question about the intention of the Peking authorities and people to do honor to the Allied victory. The ceremonial celebration today has been of a most complete kind, and it has been thoroughly well organized from beginning to end. The main feature of the program was a grand review of troops in the morning.

The formal celebrations began with the firing of a salute of 108 guns at six o'clock this morning. From a little after that time troops were moving about the city ready to take up their respective lines of march to the review ground, which was the extensive courtyard before the Tai Ho Tien. The Tai Ho Tien is in the very heart of the Forbidden City, and is really part of the private grounds of the ex-Imperial family. It is a magnificent setting for a review spectacle. The great courtyard itself will easily accommodate ten thousand troops, and the terraces of buildings on each side will accommodate five thousand spectators. On the north side of the enclosure stands the Tai Ho Tien itself, with magnificent flights of steps and terraces leading up to it, and containing the great dais on which the Emperors sat when they held audience. The great central terrace was today the saluting base, and amply accommodated the principal actors in the great scene.

At 9:30 the troops began to take up positions in the enclosure. There were twelve masses of them, arranged six on each side of the great central pathway, and at right angles to it, six facing west and six facing east, and the two sides facing each other. Then came the troops of the Allied Legations, a company of each, and took up positions along the central approach. By ten o'clock the troops to the number of 8,000 had taken up their formations, and the public had begun to stream into the great terraces. The arrangements for the public were excellent. Each spectator had been provided with a ticket of admission, those for the ladies being slightly different from those for the gentlemen, and the colors varying according to the gate by which the guest was to enter. The distribution of the guests to different entrances prevented anything in the nature of a crush, and the accommodation provided was generally regarded as admirable.

5,000 Spectators Present

By eleven o'clock, when the President was almost due, there were probably five thousand spectators. At 11:10 the President entered the enclosure, accompanied by members of the Cabinet, the tuchuns and various other high officers of state. He passed through the lines of troops and eventually reached the great Tai Ho Tien terrace, where he took up an assigned position. Then, at a signal, the standard-bearers of the various companies of Allied troops, including the Chinese, marched up to the terrace, and formed up in front of the President, who first saluted the flags and then delivered a very brief address to the standard-bearers.

The group on the grand terrace was a brilliant one, including all the Allied Ministers, with their staffs, the commandants of the Allied Legations, many Chinese officers, the provincial tuchuns, a number of foreign and Chinese ladies, as well as the President and his suite.

As a spectacle the review was gorgeous, the military coloring below and the brilliant Imperial yellow ties above, the dozen military bands, with a cloudless sky over all, and a blazing sun adding warmth to the coloring and even something of geniality to the atmosphere, which would otherwise have been freezing cold. As an event in China's history the review was significant. Not only has China at last discovered that the Central Powers are really beaten, a fact which she acknowledges more and more emphatically every day, but for the first time in her history a Chinese officer has been in command of regular foreign troops. All the troops participating in today's ceremony were under the command of General Tuan Chi-jui, who was Commander-in-Chief by reason of his actual military rank and of the fact that he had been Chairman of the War Participation Bureau. This is unprecedented in Chinese history, and the Chinese rightly are making much of it.

This morning all the newspapers were printed in red, and for two days there will be a newspaper holiday. Tonight every main street is illuminated with Chinese lanterns and every public building is ablaze with great electric designs. Never has Peking been so brilliantly lit up. "The Capital" may now be seen, "all the year round, from dusk to dawn, blazing with a splendor besides which the illuminations for La Hogue and Bismarck would have looked pale," but tonight the whole sky reflects a multiplied glory, that represents an enormous strain on the electric resources of the city, both within and without the Legation Quarter. In the Legation Quarter the illuminations are carried out also on a grand scale, the great legation gates and the banks especially lending themselves to display, and every advantage is being taken of their adaptability.

Ceremony In Parliament

Peking, November 29.—This afternoon the Cabinet and the two Houses of Parliament jointly celebrated the Allied victory by entertaining the Allied ministers and a large number of leading Chinese and foreigners. The ceremonies took place in the Tai Ho Tien in the Forbidden City, and the weather was by no means enticing, but nevertheless a very large company eventually gathered in the ancient hall, where speeches were delivered expressing the fullest appreciation of the significance of the Allied success in Europe.

The chairman of the occasion was Mr. Liang Shih-yi, Speaker of the Senate, who, at precisely two o'clock, mounted a dais in front of the great throne and delivered an address of welcome. In the course of the address, which was interpreted at a later stage by Dr. Tsai, late Principal of Tsing Hua College, and now a member of the Senate, Mr. Liang set forth the real issues of the war and the reasons that had led to China's participation in it; and he also stated the objects of the celebration and called attention to the fact that it was taking place in the "Hall of Great Harmony," a hall dedicated to peace five centuries ago.

Following Mr. Liang's address came a message from the President, read by his deputy, and this was followed by addresses from the Acting Prime Minister and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, who although chiefly confining himself to expressing the thanks of the two Houses of Parliament for the attendance of the guests, Chinese and foreign, took the opportunity of expressing his firm conviction that the Allied victory was a victory for all time of Right over Might.

The addresses were listened to very attentively by all present, and at their close the whole company gave hearty cheers for the Allied flags, which had been ranged before the main door of the Hall. The taking of a group photograph of those present, and a very keen practical appreciation of the refreshments provided, brought a most interesting ceremony to a close.

Tomorrow the celebrations are to be concluded with a great torchlight procession in which students, the mercantile community and official classes are to take part.

WOMAN'S CLUB HEARS AMERICAN PROGRAM

Songs Of Indian and Negro Inspiration Make Up Interesting Afternoon

A very pleasing and out-of-the-ordinary afternoon of music was offered at yesterday's meeting of the American Woman's Club, and was received with hearty appreciation by the large attendance of members and their friends. Songs and compositions of American Indian and negro inspiration made up the program, which was given by the Music Department of the Club and arranged by Mrs. G. F. Ashley.

The program opened with two finely played piano selections by Mrs. S. E. Taylor-MacDowell's "To an Indian Lodge" and Cadman's "Legend." Three Indian sentimental bits by Cadman, sung by Mrs. R. M. Bradley, found much favor with the audience and the first part of the program closed with Mr. A. Carson's singing of one of Coleridge Taylor's compositions from the Marriage Feasts of Hiawatha. Miss Lamond accompanied for both singers.

Three negro "spirituals," arranged by H. T. Burleigh and excellently given by Mrs. J. J. Connell, formed the first part of the program of old negro melodies, the last of these—"Nobody Knows de Trouble I've Seen"—pleasing especially. Mrs. R. B. Nichols played a valise suite of Coleridge Taylors and Mr. Carson gave two appealing negro melodies by Homer, the "Banjo Song" and "Uncle Rome." The program closed with a negro plantation song and two lullabies, sung by Mrs. Connell. Mrs. Taylor accompanied for Mrs. Connell.

Mrs. J. B. Powell and Mrs. G. R. Loehr were hostesses at yesterday's tea, which was followed by a short business meeting. It was announced that on Wednesday, December 11, a tiffin will be given at the Columbia Country Club in honor of Mrs. C. S. Lobingier and Mrs. F. J. Seeman. The next meeting of the Club, to be held December 17, will be in the nature of a "Christmas Party." There will be a Christmas tree and the children of the members will be invited to attend. Refreshments will be served and there will be a program of games for the youngsters. Members are asked to bring toys which can be spared, articles of clothing and food which will be distributed to various institutions. Mrs. M. N. Zankl, who is in charge, requested in this connection, the use of motor cars for the purpose of delivering the articles.

The following members were admitted to the Club at yesterday's meeting: Mrs. William Yost, Mrs. F. C. Mabey, Miss Mary Caldwell, Miss Josephine Jenkins and Miss Geraldine Rennie.

The Literary Department of the Club will meet at the Carlton at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow. Mrs. Baldwin is the leader and the subject will be "The Scenery of China."

Union Church Guild Has Lecture Tonight

Before the Union Church Literary and Social Guild tonight, Mrs. Hudson will give a lecture on Chinese art and will read "The Story of the Guitar," one of the most popular gems of Chinese literature. The lecture will be given in the Union Church Hall at nine o'clock.

Peking Political Notes From Chinese Press

The newly formed organization of the Tuchuns will elect General Tuan Chi-jui its head. It aims to re-organize the Peking Party. To strengthen the position of the Tuchuns, its members propose to abandon the office of Division Commanders and make the brigade commander the highest military officer in the provinces aside from the Military Governor.

The seven members of the Administrative Council in Canton have jointly sent a direct message to President Hsu, urging the immediate inauguration of a peace conference. The Tuchuns are opposed to the holding of a peace conference in Nanking. They prefer to have it in Peking. If this can not be done, then they suggest Hankow as the place for the conference.

Lieutenant-General Saito of the Japanese Legation informed the Kirin Tuchun that it has been proposed by Japan to send a certain unit of military guards numbering more than 1,000 to conduct a "winter touring expedition" to Kirin and the authorities are requested to give them the necessary protection.

Another peace association to be known as the Society for Peace and Union has been promoted by Mr. San Pao-chai, the former Minister of Finance. It aims to secure the union of the country after the conclusion of peace. Delegates representing the new organization have been sent to the South to open negotiations.

Y.W.C.A. DRIVE TEAMS MEET THIS AFTERNOON

Members To Report Progress
Of Campaign; But $4,000
To Be Raised

Members of teams campaigning for funds for the Young Women's Christian Association will meet at the local association rooms, 114 Quinsan Road, this afternoon at three o'clock. Reports of various team leaders will be made.

But a little over $4,000 remains to be raised in three days and much of the amount is already pledged.

At the last meeting teams captained by Chinese leaders were ahead in the totals collected.

That Chinese women are rapidly acquiring the art of financial appeal by direct informational and educational methods is a fact, as the following incidents of the current record of the annual budget campaign for the Young Women's Christian Association now going on in Shanghai go to prove.

"Almost without exception these Chinese women have been received with courtesy, often with kindly interest and nearly always with a subscription as the result of the interview," said a Y.W.C.A. official.

"One Chinese woman in calling upon a well known Chinese professional man was received promptly as courteously as she had been last year when she was given a liberal subscription. This year however, he was somewhat surprised to be called on again as he had thought his cheque for 1917 was a once-for-all affair. It is the intention of solicitors for this annual budget to impress upon all givers the fact that the Young Women's Christian Association will look to the community, especially the Chinese residents, for backing and support every year.

So this well-informed, keen Chinese woman regretted she had not made this quite plain and when she was given a subscription half the size of last year's she was cheerful and thankful and quite undismayed, saying that next year she would come again, and money or no money, he should have the opportunity to know of the work done and the greater things planned for the future. All of which was taken in good part, making the loss of money a small thing in comparison to the larger and more kindly contact with one who is now a friend of the Young Women's Christian Association."

"In one instance a business man who had taken the trouble to accept an invitation to the Young Women's Christian Association and so inform himself of the value of its work, not only welcomed the solicitors but put aside firmly the appeal of a Taoist priest who followed them into the office. This man asked what he had given last year, made out and handed over a cheque which was just twice that amount and then proceeded to give the names of other business men who he was sure would be willing to help, a very genuine service to the cause, for the Young Women's Christian Association has far to go yet before even a fair proportion of the community knows its real object and aims."

"A charming returned student went to call upon a Chinese man who knew little of the Young Women's Christian Association and was quite indifferent as to further information. He had given to many causes already and was inclined to try to cut the interview short. To this the enthusiastic girl was firmly opposed and begged most successfully for time to show him how and why the Association was not in the class of many of the good things he was helping to support. To convince him that the Y.W.C.A. is not in any sense a charity or a philanthropy did not take long for she had her facts at her tongue's end and when she could show that the great objective was Christian leadership among Chinese women, her cause was won. His subscription was small, but the Young Women's Christian Association had gained a friend to whom its cause may be presented in the future and from whom a sympathetic interest may be counted upon."

"This is a far more desirable result than just a sum of money given without understanding. In none of these cases were big subscriptions obtained. Those do come here and there and are necessary but these incidents prove that Chinese women are learning how to do finance work which, as any man will agree, does not always mean money at once."

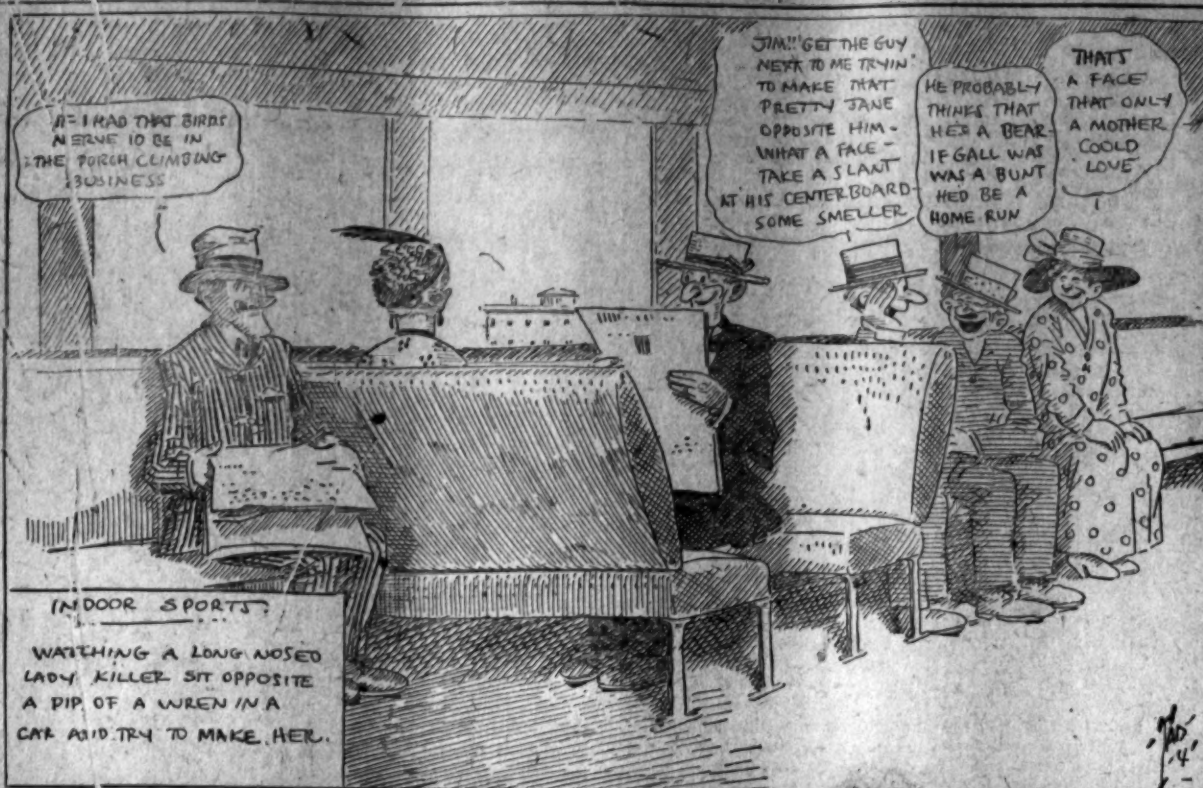

"As the Young Women's Christian Association is building for the future, the Y.W.C.A. official concluded, it must lay its foundations broad and deep in the friendship of the men and women of this great and growing city of Shanghai."

MR. CHU PAO-SAN RESIGNS FROM STOCK EXCHANGE

Quits Sino-Japanese Organisation
After Severe Attacks
In Chinese Papers

Mr. Chu Pao-san, chairman of the Shanghai Chinese Chamber of Commerce, yesterday tendered his resignation as auditor of the newly established Shanghai Stock and Produce Exchange on Foochow and Kiangse Roads. His letter of resignation set forth two grounds why he was unable to hold the office. The first was that he had much other important business to attend to and the other was that he did not think that he deserved to hold the office, as he had performed no meritorious service for the exchange.

Following the announcement of the appointment of Mr. Chu as the auditor of the corporation, there had been a great deal of adverse criticism in the Chinese press of Mr. Chu's action in accepting an office of this nature in a concern which involves mainly Japanese interests. A number of letters had appeared in the Chinese papers attacking the exchange and the employment of one of Shanghai's notable merchants as auditor. It is understood that Mr. Chu himself also received several letters concerning his connection with the new organization.

An Appeal For Referees

The call has gone out for recruits for a Shanghai Referee's Association, the purpose of which is to assure an adequate and competent staff of arbiters for Shanghai football matches.

The Association is being promoted under the auspices of the Shanghai Football Association and it is hoped to enlist the services of half-a-dozen or more men interested in the sport so that the Association may depend upon a certain number of qualified referees to take charge of its various competitions. It is pointed out that it is not absolutely necessary for prospective members to have had previous experience, provided they knew something about the game, as all intending referees will be given every possible assistance to qualify. Moreover, the S.F.A. is empowered to issue certificates to those referees who, in their opinion, are qualified to officiate in any of the official competitions.

Besides, as hostilities have now ceased, there is bound to be an influx of footballers and it is put forward that it is good policy to have the Association in such a position as to be able to furnish referees for the larger number of games likely to be played. Those interested are asked to get in touch with Mr. A. R. C. Fulton, 12a Quinsan Gardens, 'phone North 63.

U.S. ARMY RAILWAY TEAM IN FRANCE LAYS 280 SECTIONS IN ONE DAY

Two Engineer Privates Capture
The Individual Honors
With 53

LABOR BOYS DINE LATE

Lieutenant Sets Table For Night
Feed—Battalion Puts In Busy
Three Months

(Contributions to The Stars and Stripes)

Paris, October 4.—Completing sections of narrow gauge track at the rate of eight feet a minute, a team representing Company C of the 'Stent' Engineers won a track assembling contest at Light Railway Central Shops with a total of 280 sections totaling 1,400 meters in length. Company C and Company B of the Blank Engineers were tied for second with 279 sections each.

Individual honors were captured by Privates T. A. Olsen and H. W. Behren of Company B, this pair having 53 sections to their credit. Privates Paul P. Hackett and William Morrissey of the winning team were second with 52 sections.

Each team was composed of 12 men, who worked in pairs, placing and bolting rails upon the steel ties. Two five meter length rails and eight ties, fastened with 64 bolts, were used for each section. Endurance as well as nimble fingers counted in turning out one section every 11 minutes, which was the record made by the winning pair. Six helpers were kept busy providing the competitors with the necessary bolts and ties.

Race On At 7 a.m.

The race began at 7 o'clock in the morning, the men quickly swarming into a break-neck pace that was continued without let-up during the entire day, in spite of raw winds and drizzling rain. It was at once evident that the contest would be a close one, for section after section was completed without any one of the teams gaining even the slightest advantage.

Gradually the two companies of the Blank Engineers forged ahead, and at noon they were leading the 'Stent' Engineer representatives by six sections. By three o'clock Company B increased its lead to nine, and the members of the team were already planning how to celebrate the victory.

Then the unexpected happened. With their first defeat in a 15 months' Army career seemingly inevitable, the 'Stent' Engineers became desperate, and two men in the outfit became heroes in a grandstand finish that equaled any up-hill fight staged on the Polo Grounds in ante bellum days.

The Birds Speed Up

"Speed up, birds!" shouted this pair as they completed a section in seven minutes. The birds did speed up. There were no crowded bleachers nor cheering rooters—the fellows who would have liked to watch the contest were busy on jobs of their own—but there was all kinds of pep in that sport. The final count, by a committee of neutral officers, gave the 'Stent' Engineers the victory by a single section.

"We gotta hand it to you fellows," said the sergeant in charge of the Company B team.

The officers of the post had promised to provide a feed for the winners, but the race was so close that it seemed unfair to discriminate against anyone. So that night a regular celebration was held in the mess hall, the members of the three teams being the guests. The lunch consisted of salad, sandwiches, apple pie and doughnuts.

W. I. GUENDISH, Ensign.

Not long ago, just before the recent American advance, news came to the commander of a certain colored Labor Company that it was absolutely necessary that a certain amount of goods be piled on a train that would pass through the town in central France where the company was stationed in order that the supplies might reach the men of the front line before it was too late.

That evening the men of the company came in dog tired, soaking wet from the all-day rain and anxious for the comfort of the barracks. While they were lined up for supper the first lieutenant who was in command briefly explained what was needed and told them that he would not order a single man to go down to the railroad to load the train, but would ask for volunteers. Every man who was willing to put in the evening for the good of the Service was to step one pace to the front.

Every single man, including the cooks and K. P.'s, who were at the window and overheard the speech, stepped forward that one pace. So the big trucks were loaded down with the whole company. The lieutenant was on the front seat of one of them and the mess sergeant and the top on the front seats of the other two.

About 10 o'clock the lieutenant and the mess sergeant and two K. P.'s walked back to the barracks and got supper for the crowd. The lieutenant himself set the table with jam and melons, which he bought. And when 1 o'clock in the morning came the company returned to a fine, hot meal. When 6 o'clock came a few hours later every man turned out, ready for the work of the day.

W. J. WALKER, Y.M.C.A.

In your article of September 6, "Achievement," you recite two achievements by troops of the A. E. F. which are interesting and will no doubt be inspiring to others who must content themselves with doing all they can to end the war in the S. O. S.

Laying aside false modesty and accepting your invitation, I submit for your consideration a few achievements accomplished by one battalion within the period of three months. We have not broken any records that we know of, but we cannot help feeling that we are setting a pace hard to beat for a non-combatant outfit:

Cleared 35,693 square yards of timber.

Laid 3,750 square yards of flooring.

Laid 2,137 square yards of roofing.

Erected 1,277 sections of frame barracks.

Cut 516 cords of brush.

Excavated 8,571 cubic yards of dirt.

Rebuilt 103 gasoline motors.

Repaired 106 transmissions.

Repaired 208 magneto's.

Repaired 278 batteries.

Repaired 103 generators.

Repaired 108 starting motors.

Repaired 19 gas tractors.

Repaired 11 rheostats.

Repaired 81 motor trucks and automobiles.

Made 479 bearings.

Sawed 28,025 feet of lumber.

STEAK AND ONIONS UNDER SHELLFIRE

Subsistence Officer Tells Of Hot Meals Served In The Trenches

BEST ONLY FOR SOLDIERS

Rations In Airtight Containers
Always Ready In Case Of A Barrage

New York, October 14.—Colonel William R. Grove, U.S.A., Chief of the Subsistence Division on the staff of General Pershing, has written for Trench and Camp, the army camp publication, an article in which he tells how the American first line troops are supplied with food of a wholesomeness and quality never before approached in warfare.

Colonel Grove before the war was one of the senior officers in the Quartermaster's Department at Washington, and before that was for several years the quartermaster of the Military Academy at West Point. In the course of his article, which is captioned "Beefsteak Smothered in Onions Served Under Fire in France," Colonel Grove says:

"When you men in the cantonments sit down to your noonday meal in the mess tent and tuck into roast beef, fresh vegetables served steaming hot, and wind up with ice cream, did you ever stop to think that serving hot food in the middle of the day to the man up in the front trenches 'Over There' is the most difficult job put up to the Quartermaster Corps?"

"Of course, we try to serve three hot meals a day on the firing line, but when the shellfire is particularly brisk we have to be content with one hot meal. And that one, of course, is served at night. It is possible to get food fresh from the portable kitchens into the trenches under cover of darkness, but the German guns would scramble our service if we attempted to make deliveries in the middle of the day to all the fighting units.

"Our mess service at the front is very materially affected by the terrain occupied. If the trenches are located in a country that slopes toward the enemy, it is exceedingly difficult to move supplies in daylight. The bearers would soon attract hot attention from the Germans.

"If the trenches are not exposed to direct shellfire, and there is a good system of communicating trenches we can pick our own meal hours and serve hot food four or five times a day, even under the most difficult circumstances, however, we manage to get hot meals to the front at least once every twenty-four hours.

"I spent some time in France only a few weeks ago, and during that period there wasn't a report of a miss under the once-a-day program. However, we cannot stick to a definite hour for the hot meals, even at night. If we did, the enemy would soon discover the schedule and make things lively for the bearers.

"Notwithstanding the handicap, created by the big guns, the quality of the food delivered in the trenches is exceedingly good. A fair sample of a front-line dinner would include hot roast beef, fresh spinach, stewed tomatoes, potatoes or corn, ice cream and cake, and plenty of coffee with sugar and evaporated milk.

"Although this would not be regarded as a remarkable meal on this side of the Atlantic, it is a hard one to serve in first-class condition in France and under heavy shellfire. It represents an overcoming of exceedingly difficult transportation problems.

"The most difficult meals to serve are those that include fresh vegetables and fruit, chicken and eggs. But, with the cheerful co-operation of the French people, it has been possible to vary the monotony of regular army rations. This detail is entrusted to the regulation officers in charge of food supplies for one or more divisions. These experts control the distribution of food according to a system that insures equal treatment of all regiments. 'I suppose a majority of the men on the American side have no idea how we manage to serve hot meals at the front. It is a simple trick. We use five-gallon thermos containers that keep meals smoking hot for several hours or preserve the frigid qualities of ice cream and other cold delicacies.

"By the use of these thermos containers we can, for example, send food forward at 3 o'clock in the morning and serve smoking hot breakfasts in the trenches at the regulation hour. As a matter of fact, there are very few dishes that we cannot put into our menus.

"This department surprised an inquirer very much a few days ago by mentioning the fact that sirloin steaks, smothered in onions, are one of the triumphs that have been achieved by our front-line chefs.

"There is always a possibility that, under particularly trying battle conditions, it may become absolutely impossible to get food into the trenches for a day or two at a time. The lines of communication might be completely cut off by a heavy barrage.

"That annoying situation would play havoc with our hot meal plans, but it would not cause the boys out in front to go hungry. Every man, of course, carries the regulation two days' rations as part of his equipment. In addition to that emergency food supply, we have a scheme that costs a lot of money, but it is worth the cost.

"The Quartermaster Corps has purchased a large supply of galvanized iron food containers. They are made in this country, filled with food, packed in heavy crates, and shipped direct to the trenches.

"Each container holds twenty-five rations. These rations, as a majority of you boys probably know, include a pound of hardtack, a pound of canned meat, a little more than an ounce of coffee, and a proportionate amount of sugar and salt. Everything is airtight and the big containers are thoroughly sealed.

"As a result, the food is absolutely protected from dampness or gas. The containers are distributed through the trenches and the canned meat in them is varied to suit any taste. It is not the sort of diet the boys at the front prefer, but it comes in mighty handy whenever the enemy is lucky enough to break up the routine of feeding."

Christian Science A Lecture By Bliss Knapp, C. S. B.

At the Lyceum Theater last night a large audience listened to an exposition of the theory and benefits of Christian Science, delivered by Mr. Bliss Knapp, C. S. B., a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church at Boston. The introduction of the speaker was made by Mr. John B. Sawyer, American Vice Consul, who spoke in part as follows:

"At the invitation of the Christian Science Society of Shanghai, we have met this evening to hear an address on Christian Science. The speaker is one of a number of authorized lecturers who have done and are doing much to correct popular misconceptions regarding Christian Science and so to silence much mis-conceived opposition."

"Christian Science challenges attention in two ways, by the phenomenal growth of its church organization, and by the many individual instances of lives transformed through its teachings."

"Christian Science churches and societies are now found in every land, and wherever this great movement has spread there are men and women who testify to a new and better view of life."

"We all realize that a large portion of humanity look upon life as made up of struggle and disappointment and final defeat. Such persons, by the thousands, are finding in Christian Science a more spiritual view, which enables them to see life much as Isaiah must have seen it when, he wrote, 'Ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace; the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.'"

"A religious teaching which turns distress into joy and peace surely has some message for each one of us and deserves our best attention."

Mr. Knapp's Lecture

Mr. Knapp spoke as follows: There is no doubt that everyone would do well to consider earnestly Paul's advice to the Thessalonians to 'prove all things.' It is true that one does not really believe that which he has not proved, true that only that which is founded on actual demonstration will survive the ordeal of human experience. Paul was not misled with a mere acceptance of his teaching. He well knew that, unless his statements were proved to be true beyond the possibility of a doubt, his instruction had been of no avail. So he depicts the trial of faith by which Noah was able to overcome the impossibilities; and Abraham could offer up Isaac, believing that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead. Throughout the ages the truth of the world has been attested by 'signs following.' Although, as it is written, God 'called' unto Moses, and made him bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt, his hesitation was only overcome by two great evidences of spiritual power—the handling of the serpent, and the healing of leprosy. This manifestation of divine authority lessened his personal responsibility, and assured him of the confidence of the people; for he had the explanation from God that if the people would not believe the first sign, they would believe the latter sign which indicated the power of God to heal disease. The opposition to Moses' leadership operated most actively through his sister Miriam; but when he healed her of leprosy, and yet others of serpent bites, their doubts were overwhelmed by the attestation of God's protecting care.

Centuries later, a sign was demanded of Jesus by certain scribes and Pharisees who did not believe his testimony, and he answered, 'An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: when the messengers of John the Baptist questioned him in perfectly good faith, he said, 'Go and show John again those things which ye hear and see: The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.'"

Healing Attested By Christian Science

The Christian Science Church adopted a like method of answering honest inquiry. Our church provides a testimonial meeting where members of the congregation may bear witness to the healing power of God which they themselves have seen or experienced. They may describe cases of healing like the one which brought my own family to Christian Science. For thirteen years my mother had suffered from a difficulty said by physicians to be inflammatory rheumatism. Her joints became distorted and she gradually became a helpless cripple and a great sufferer. Finally the physicians told her that she had but a short time to live. As a last resort, we sought the aid of a Christian Science practitioner, and after two weeks' treatment, my mother regained her health; her joints were restored to their natural condition, and she enjoyed perfect health thereafter.

The healing of my mother was so obvious that it could not be ignored. It was just as evident to her friends and neighbors as to herself. It convinced us that Christian Science is that Science of Christianity which Jesus demonstrated, for his healing could no more be disputed than the healing of the blind man as reported in the Gospels. To those who doubted the possibility of his healing, he replied simply, 'Whereas I was blind, now I see.' He could not tell how this change had been wrought, but he knew that the healing of his blindness could not be denied. Christian Science provides the explanation of that healing, and it is the purpose of this lecture to present that explanation to you.

Healing Methods Contrasted

An epidemic seldom attacks more than twenty percent of a population. When confronted by such an epidemic, it is customary for physicians to study the cause of the calamity from a physical viewpoint, carefully analyzing the while, the former physical condition of every afflicted individual. It does not occur to them to question what made the eighty percent immune. The physician painstakingly diagnoses the disease, because he is governed by the belief that health is a condition of the flesh. He supposes it to be a personal possession, humanly circumscribed, and the body to be a kind of storage battery generating the vital current. The Christian Scientist, in such a case, studies just as thoroughly the origin of health, for it is evident to him that health and not disease is the object of his search. He knows that Jesus presented the only perfect system of healing known to men, and he taught his disciples how to restore health by starting with the proposition that God is the creator of life.

Health A Divine Right

When the framers of the American Constitution admitted that life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are creations of God, and not of man, their task was wonderfully simplified. They recognized the fact that they were not required to create any rights but simply to interpret those that were already created. The success of that instrument, the Constitution of the United States of America, depended upon the correctness of their interpretation of that which was fundamentally right. The result has been a model of democratic government.

When men are willing to concede that health, as well as life, or liberty, is a divine right, divinely bestowed upon man by his creator, they will cease to believe in, or fear, the so-called laws of health which originate in mortal opinion, and will become interpreters of that inherent right. They will cease to be autocrats in the government of their own bodies, and their health will increase in proportion to their understanding that in God we all 'live, and move, and have our being.'

God Instructing Moses

The first exhibition of healing recorded in the Bible came by 'looking away from the body into the true nature of God.' For forty years Moses had been governing the flock of Israel, his father-in-law, with autocratic power. The sign or symbol of that autocratic power was a shepherd's rod. When, by the direction of God, the rod was cast down and became a serpent, Moses was afraid. He had never learned that human will was the serpent in the Garden of Eden. Nor did he understand how to gain supremacy over it. But obedience to God's command established that supremacy. That lesson enabled Moses to learn two great facts—that human will and personified sin are interchangeable, and that obedience to divine guidance gave him the mastery over sin. The divine supremacy has been expressed in the Lord's Prayer, 'Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.'

Healing Power Discovers

The power of God had been recognized for a long time, but not his healing nature. It will be remembered that long before, God had revealed himself to Abraham as the Almighty, the one supreme power governing the universe and man. But it was a mere abstraction. There was no mode by which human consciousness could approach this truth. Consequently all that Abraham could do was to entertain a supreme faith in the omnipotence of God. The faith of Abraham has been referred to throughout the Bible.

The works of faith continued as God said to Moses, 'I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, known to them,' indicating that there was more to learn about the nature of God than the one fact of his supreme power. When finally Moses discovered that the supreme power of God reaches through law, it ceased instantly to be an abstraction and became a concrete power with a well-defined mode of approach, and for this discovery of Moses that the supreme power of God reaches to the individual human experience through law, he has been known as the law-giver.

When it became known that divine power reaches individual human experience, not through any form of idolatry, not through any graven image, but through well-defined law, the secret of divine healing was disclosed. Moses could then be guided by divine intention, and thus heal leprosy and serpent bites with mathematical certainty and precision. The nature of God had been proved in human experience to be a power of health and purity. It reached beyond faith and appealed directly to reason and understanding.

Therefore, 'Acquaint now thyself with him [that is, with God], and be at peace.' One who is sick is not at peace. One who is distressed in mind or body with sin, disease or fear, is not at peace. Nevertheless, less acquaintance with the divine nature endows one with the power of peace, which necessarily rules out all disturbance, whether mental or physical. Therein is presented in a brief statement the precise method of Christian healing, as acquaintance with the truth about the nature of God. Mrs. Eddy has reiterated that in her book, 'Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures' (p. 72), as follows, 'Not personal intercommunication but divine law is the communicator of truth, health, and harmony to earth and humanity.'

Truth Healing Scientific

That which is unchanging, and which also operates through law, is Truth. So we find Moses declaring, 'Thou art a God of truth, and without iniquity.' When therefore Jesus declared, 'Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free,' he explained the operation of a Christian Science treatment. To know the Truth is to understand the unchanging nature of God as a power of health and purity operating through law. Whatever one really understands, he can express. When one understands that two and two make four, he can express that fact. Then to understand the healing and purifying nature of God, enables one to express that nature. Such is the power of freedom in mind and body. This explanation of Christian healing will, I think, leave no impression that we ignore difficulties. Although some aver that a Christian Scientist endeavors to heal by trying to imagine that the condition is not there. It is evident that this is a misapprehension; for imagination is a state of ignorance; and ignorance never healed anything and it never can.

Disease is unquestionably evil and, therefore, it cannot be the truth of being. Inasmuch as Christian Science is a Science, its method of dealing with error is precisely as it is done in mathematics. If a mathematician is confronted with the misstatement that two and two make five, he does not study that mistake; for a mistake could not be understood. Only that which is true can be understood. That is why David in the psalm asks the question, 'Who can understand his errors?' No one can; not one. Consequently an intelligent individual will never try to do it. He will study more thoroughly the rule of truth that governs the problem, and act in obedience thereto. Then the error disappears, just as ignorance disappears, before intelligence. And where has it gone? Into its native unreality. The only reason the error ever has been in the individual's ignorance of the truth. It ceases to exist to his intelligent understanding. Consequently an error is real or unreal only to the degree of the individual's ignorance or intelligence concerning the truth. It is the Truth that makes free.

Discipline Mental

A Christian Scientist learns that disease is essentially mental in its cause. As long as he believes it to be entirely physical, he may well feel helpless before it. In fact there could be no such thing as Christian healing if disease were actually physical. The medical schools of today have been employing experiments which indicate the mental cause of disease. There can be no doubt that in every case it is the result of wrong thinking. Medical experiments have proved conclusively that the individual's thinking seriously affects the circulation of the blood, and some interesting constants have been drawn from the observation of the effect of wrong thinking on the body. Perhaps the most common observation is the flushed or pallid face that results from anger. People have been known to die in a fit of anger and also from extreme fright. Since the discovery of the X-ray, physicians have been able to learn the effect of thought on the digestive system. The method is simple enough. Some harmless opaque substance like bismuth is mixed with the food. Then as one eats the prepared food, the entire process of its digestion may be observed with the X-ray. By that method, physicians have proved that the digestion of students taking a severe examination, in great fear, has been retarded fully two hours. Anger also hinders digestion and poisons the system. The results of other experiments might be presented, but these are sufficient to indicate the necessity of correcting thought when dealing with disease.

Suppose, for example, one has eaten something and soon after is seized with distressing pain in the stomach. The pain is a distinct physical sensation which cannot be ignored. A Christian Science practitioner is summoned and he immediately remembers the testimony of Christ Jesus, 'Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man,' a saying which once offended the Pharisees.

The disciples sought an explanation of the parable from Jesus, remarking on the offense which it gave to the Pharisees. Surprised at their lack of understanding, Jesus proceeded to explain that 'whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught. But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man.' Regardless of what thought or act may occasion the pain, if the patient would only refuse to admit it into his heart or mind, it could not defile him. But when one begins to take it into his heart or mind, giving to it a supposed cause or reason, that defiles the man. 'For out of the heart the frightful injustice inflicted on the Chinese people themselves, the internal unrest has encouraged the alien enemy during the supreme crisis of the war and hampered the effective co-operation of China with the Allies. Thereby China allowed an unequalled opportunity to slip through her fingers—an opportunity that will never return. But China will sacrifice a yet greater opportunity if she goes to the European Conference not as a united nation but as a house divided against itself. Does China seriously welcome the prospect of two groups of representatives attending the Peace Conference, one for the North and one for the South?

There could be nothing more certain, in the event of the civil strife in this country not ceasing by the time the European Peace Conference meets, than that the old story of two dogs fighting over a bone and another carrying off the bone will be repeated. Japan's delegates at the Peace Conference will represent a united nation with a single will and purpose. China will find herself at a hopeless disadvantage. If the warring factions in China want to ruin themselves, that is their own business, but they have no right to ruin China, and injure the prospects of world progress. They can ruin themselves if they want to, but they have no right to involve others in the ruin.

The Allies and the Chinese people themselves will see to it that the object of the militarists in China is frustrated. Their hour has struck. Chinese businessmen throughout the country should not let this opportunity slip to add the weight of their urgent advice to that of the Allied Powers who are known to be friendly to China, in pressing upon both North and South the necessity of immediate peace in China.

The Nichi Nichi On American Idealism

(From The Nichi Nichi)

President Wilson, heading a group of the first-class American diplomats, is now going to Versailles. It is often stated that the problems regarding the League of Nations and "the freedom of the seas" are the most important in the forthcoming peace conference, and that President Wilson goes to France principally because of his desire to exert himself for the realization of these two questions.

Many think that America is a country of materialism. But this is absolutely not the proper interpretation. Americans are idealists. They sometimes forget all other things in order to concentrate their energy upon their great ideal. The war against Germany was indeed a fine expression of American idealism, and the peace now forthcoming will be another example of the expression of American idealism. "The freedom of the seas" has been a dream of American idealistic politicians since the days of Jefferson. "The League of Nations" has also been dreamed of by many American statesmen among whom Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan are most conspicuous. Now the time comes when Mr. Wilson, as the President of the United States, the country which decided the fate of the Allied nations, at the last moment of the war, holds the key to the questions, which his great predecessors could not solve. Certainly, the sacrifices America made in the war are great, but when we think of America's enviable position in the post-bellum world politics, everybody sees that America has paid what she had to pay.

That America will become the leader of nations in the post-bellum world politics there is no doubt. Indeed, if America exerts herself for the welfare of humanity by wisely using her great influence, it will not be very hard to realize utopia in the world. But, if America exerts herself for her own interests alone by using her influence wrongfully, the result will be the resurrection of the German militarism.

We are convinced that President Wilson has courage and determination to sacrifice all selfish interests and unnecessary traditional feelings in order to make his scheme successful. But it is really a great disappointment on the other hand, that there are a number of politicians in America who still entertain traditional ill-feeling and prejudice toward the Asiatic nations. Recently, Senator Polinder opposed the scheme of the "League of Nations" on the ground that it would endanger the Monroe Doctrine. Another American Senator, Mr. Owen, said that the League of Nations should be created for the purpose of protecting the white races against the possible danger of Oriental militarism. Germany's destruction may bring a permanent peace to the European and American nations, but until all the white races realize the fallacy of their prejudices the other races cannot be at rest.

LEVY—At Hospital St. Marie, on the 2nd December, 1918, Reginald Simon, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Levy at the age of twelve years and ten months. Deeply regretted. The funeral will take place at the Mohawk Road Cemetery today at 12:15 p.m. All friends are invited.

IMPARTIAL AND PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, DECEMBER 4, 1918

The Allied Memorandum To Peking

THE Memorandum presented to President Hsu Shih-chang by the five Allied diplomats in Peking, published elsewhere today, seriously urging a speedy reconciliation with the South, thus enabling this country to work in harmony with the Allied Powers. In the reconstructive era that has dawned, shows that the Allies are fully awake to the grave danger of continued strife in China. But the Chinese politicians, of both sides, do not appear even at this late hour to be alive to the meaning of the victory over Germany just achieved by the Allies else there would have been no occasion to present the Allied Memorandum and the warring factions in China would of their own accord have buried the hatchet.

That the document just presented to Peking is opportune goes without saying. Everyone, both Chinese and foreign, is by this time heartily weary of the squabble that has divided this country for two years. In the final analysis, the civil war in China reveals itself into an unseemly and selfish struggle for power on the part of certain militarists. There has been no great principle at stake. The dominant motive of the present warring strife that has retarded this country's progress has unquestionably been an inhuman one, and therefore indefensible. The callous, unpatriotic and immoral struggle has deservedly invited the opprobrium of all decent men, both Chinese and foreign, so that it may be safely asserted that anyone who opposes a cessation of the internal strife in China is an enemy of this country and a foe to world peace and progress.

We may be sure that the Allied diplomats in Peking

A Good Page to Read in the
Leisure HourLeague Of Nations Will End
Alliances, Says Tokio Jurist

It is confidently reported in the Japanese papers that Dr. Tachi, a Professor at Tokio Imperial University, who is recognized as an expert in International Law, will accompany the Japanese Plenipotentiaries to France and be present at the Peace Conference.

Interviewed by the Osaka Mainichi, the Doctor says that of many important questions to come up for discussion as basic terms of peace, a League of Nations and the freedom of the seas will probably surpass all others in importance. He does not like to criticize in detail the merits and demerits of the principle of the League of Nations at the present juncture. He is inclined to believe that as this endeavor is most strenuously supported by America, it will materialize in some form or other. He expects that in case of the idea being consummated, America will proceed to take exception to the continuance of offensive and defensive alliances between nations who are parties to the League. A League of Nations differs in nature from a compact of alliance, and therefore there is no reason why alliances existing between nations belonging to the League should be absolutely prohibited. But if by any chance America should formulate such a view and her view should finally prevail, the Anglo-Japanese Alliance may cease to exist. This is surely a question worthy of serious consideration at the hands of the Japanese.

The freedom of the seas, the Doctor proceeds, is a question no less important. It aims at the freedom of communications on the sea at all times from all perils. The carrying out of this idea would involve new conceptions of International Law in such matters as the abolition of the capture of private property, the abolition of contraband of war, the abolition of commercial blockade, the prohibition or restriction of the destruction or sinking of steamers, and the restriction of the laying of mines. All these questions have an important bearing upon the commercial interests of enemy countries in war-time, and their final settlement at the Peace Conference will have a far-reaching effect upon the future peace of the world. It is a mistake, says Dr. Tachi, for the Japanese nation to leave the study of these important problems exclusively in the hands of scholars as purely legal questions, for it is no exaggeration to say that the future destiny of Japan depends a great deal upon the manner in which these questions are disposed of.

proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: These are the things which defile a man." When the testimony of the flesh is overbalanced by the peace, joy and power of God's ever-presence, then the truth will indeed make us free. Contemplating Truth A Corrective.

Christian healing has nothing in common with the will of the flesh. On the other hand, it is in complete agreement with the will of God. For that reason it can never be divorced from Christian theology. To meditate on the nature of God, in the full expectation of gaining a better understanding of Him, is generally considered a distinct mark of devotion. To meditate thus in full sincerity must feed and satisfy one with His health and holiness.

One may behold a beautiful field of flowers. As he stops to contemplate their rare beauty, his thought is fed and satisfied. He has taken nothing from them, but he has gained much that is enduring. Thus thousands of people, devout in their thought of God, have turned to him to meditate on the beauty of His goodness, on the strength of His meekness, and on the nourishing thought of His purity and health, and they have been healed of dire affliction. Those satisfying thoughts have corrected the proclivities of the flesh, and the truth has made them free.

Footsteps To Mrs. Eddy's Discovery
Mrs. Eddy was long a member of the Congregational church, and the devotional culture she received there and at home fitted her to understand and demonstrate the Principle of divine healing. When a child she was taken with a fever. Her mother talked to her of God and assured her that God would surely answer her prayers, if she would only turn to Him. As the little girl prayed fervently, the fever left her and her mother rejoiced over the speedy recovery. Later while she was attending a neighboring school, a man escaped from an insane asylum, approached the children at play, holding a club threateningly in his hand. Mary Baker walked up to him fearlessly and naturally, imbued with a religious sense of God's presence and power. The man became subdued and gentle, and departed at her request. The following Sunday he appeared at her side during the morning service in the church. There he permitted himself to be taken in charge by an officer and led away. Some years later, when grown to womanhood, she healed a child of severe eye trouble by her fervent prayers to God.

The direct cause which led to the discovery of Christian Science was Mrs. Eddy's own healing in 1866. She had received a very serious injury by falling on the ice. The physician who attended her at the time believed that her injury would prove fatal. When she knew that nothing material could save her, Mrs. Eddy turned to her Bible for consolation. Reading its sacred truths with singleness of purpose and the faith that spiritual understanding could save her, she witnessed the immediate operation of the truth. Her healing was complete. She arose, dressed herself and started the family by her sudden appearance. Nothing but the power of God could produce such a sudden transformation, and with joy and gratitude Mrs. Eddy gave all the glory to Him.

Scriptural Interpretation

It is by no means an uncommon occurrence for devout people to be healed by their study of the Bible. But Mrs. Eddy could not be satisfied with the physical healing alone. She must know the Science or Principle of that healing. Indeed she believed she had a right to that knowledge, inasmuch as Jesus had promised another Comforter, which he defined as "the Spirit of truth." If "the spirit of truth" was not to be understood and obeyed then one might, perhaps unwittingly, obey error. But the truth had made her free and it was her right to know the explanation of that experience. Scriptural study took on a new meaning in her search for an explanation of Christian healing. Step by step spiritual law was interpreted in a new light. Her conclusions were systematically recorded and fairly tested in the healing of disease and sin. That elucidation of the scriptures formed the basis of her more complete work known as "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," first published in 1875—nine years after her discovery.

Ever since the publication of Science and Health, disease and sin have been healed through the study of it. As one ponders the explanation of scriptural texts with which it is filled, mind and body are refreshed and painful misconceptions are corrected. It has in other words brought a return of primitive Christian healing. In recognition of her distinguished service as interpreter of the Bible, the French Government has honored Mrs. Eddy by making her an officer of the French Academy.

For nearly twenty-five years I enjoyed a personal acquaintance with Mrs. Eddy. Twice she was a guest in our home, and I have been honored with invitations to her home. I have been familiar with her home life and with the members of her household; have had considerable correspondence with her; so that I have an actual knowledge of the purity and consecration of her life. But the testimony of men is barren as compared with the record of her achievements. That she has written a book, the mere reading of which will heal morally and physically, proves more accurately than can any other thing the nature of her true character.

Only an exact science can solve every problem. Experimental knowledge would necessarily omit some problems because of the limitations of human thought. But Christian Science has been tested with every human problem and found sufficient for them all, because it interprets the fundamental rights of man to life, health, and the pursuit of happiness. Mrs. Eddy did not create those rights. She simply interpreted that which is already created. The success of Christian Science has been entirely dependent upon the correctness of the interpretation.

Church Organization

When the framers of the American Constitution wrote their interpretation of man's inalienable rights they saw the wisdom of protecting the integrity of that interpretation by the organization of an army and navy. So Mrs. Eddy saw the wisdom of protecting her interpretation of the scriptures by the organization of a church. That in turn requires a code of laws for its government. The membership of the Christian Science Church is virtually a record of those individuals who have been benefited by its teachings and have enlisted in their defense. The institutional work of the church is therefore leavened." It propagates itself, cares for itself and brings in the increase.

Wheat And Tares

Sometimes an enemy may sow tares among the wheat. Then let them grow together until the harvest, when the difference becomes perfectly apparent. The tares are, in outward appearance, just like the wheat. The tares have a stalk, spike, husk and all, just like the wheat. But the husks are barren of fruit, and "By their fruits shall ye know them." The seeds of the tares are considered poisonous, and the plant is said to have an intoxicating quality akin to infatuation.

The modern tares are the seeds of hypnotic suggestion and the will of the flesh. They are poisonous and produce that intoxicating quality which is akin to infatuation, inflaming the animal propensities. They are hypnotic suggestions and human will and are the products of the carnal, sinful mind, which is enmity against God. They are the polar opposites of the spiritual Mind which Christ Jesus manifested, and we are specifically enjoined by the scriptures "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."

Conclusion

The Christian Scientist must, therefore, examine his thoughts and learn their origin. He learns to make the distinction between good and evil: for evil operates through suggestion or impulse and appeals to the nerves or flesh; whereas the power of God operates through good alone, never through animal magnetism. The power of God is communicated to individual human experience through divine law, and appeals to the reason or spiritual understanding. It operates, in other words, exactly like honesty, from Principle. There are not as many different kinds of honesty as there are different human opinions. There is just one honesty, and everybody may have it, because it is everywhere and operates through law. Then as one yields his obedience to the power of its government, because of its reasonable rightness, he gains the power of its Principle. It will correct all dishonest tendencies and establish him in the government of the one Mind, which was also in Christ Jesus. By looking to this Principle for health and purity, and yielding loving obedience to its corrective government, Christian Scientists are proving the truth of Mrs. Eddy's assertion on line 29 of page 97 of the Christian Science text-book: "Christianity is again demonstrating the Life that is Life, and the Truth that is Truth, the apostolic work of casting out error and healing the sick."

Runyon Sees 'Go To Hell' Troops As World Heroes

Correspondent Looks On As Whittlesey's 'Lost Battalion,' Polyglots A Year Ago, Emerge, Battle Scarred, From Depths Of German Trap In The Argonne Forest

By Damon Runyon

At the American Argonne Front October 12.—Out of the fog of fighting that hangs over the Forest of Argonne came limping today Whittlesey's battered battalion which made the epic defense in the dark glades beyond.

They are men of New York's own Seventy-seventh Division—most of them from the big town itself. Once Band of Stragglers

A little over a year ago this writer reported the parade of these same men, when they marched in straggling columns down Fifth avenue between walls of cheering people. Nearly all of them wore vintage straw hats that day. Some of them were in crumpled Palm Beach suits. Some of them were in overalls, having come direct from their jobs to appear in the first parade of drafted men on Manhattan Island.

Some were late of the Hudson Dusters. Some of them once trained with the Gophers. Some of them were from ornate houses on Park and Madison or the upper reaches of the Seventies and Eighties.

More were from the lower East Side Broad and Harlem, Broadway and the Bronx shuffled down the avenue in that strange procession that day, while the bands bawled "Over There!"

Later the writer saw them tumble off the trains at Yaphank carrying scared suit cases and big bundles, saw them form into irregular lines and march to their new barracks.

Many of them had been celebrating their departure for camp the night before, and looked it. Hyster street quarrelled with Greenwich village—not the Greenwich village of long-haired fame, but the harder close-cropped region around the docks.

A couple of fist fights occurred at the landing place between querulous parties from the vicinity of Erie Basin, Brooklyn. Nervous young officers, fresh from Plattsburg, flustered about trying to get a semblance of order.

Their commands brought small short replies from the new recruits. Three were Chinamen from Mott street. Also, there were Japs and Italians, all jabbering in their own language at once.

Hopeless enough as military material they seemed then. But some of the same faces I saw at Yaphank that day were under biscuit-shaped steel helmets in the muddy conditions that tramped out of the Argonne Forest today.

Big Town's Polyglots

The big town's polyglot population sent heroes of one of the Homeric fights of the war.

For four days and four nights the one-time counter jumpers, brokers' clerks, rangers, newsboys, truck drivers, collegians, peddlars and what not held the positions which they had been ordered to take and hold while several times their number of Germans were busily engaged shoveling a variety of hell upon them.

They served as the anchor catch for the whole advance. Totally cut off from their main command, without food and with very little water, the boys from the big town hung on. They fought under a man who only a short time ago was a New York lawyer, Charles Whittlesey, a tall, lean-fanked fellow, around forty years old. He has a funny little smile.

He smiled this funny little smile when one of his men who had been taken prisoner was sent back to him by the Germans with a neatly typewritten note requesting his surrender.

It would make this story more dramatic to say that Whittlesey sent back some stirring phrase in answer to the Germans. But as a matter of fact he merely smiled his funny little smile after reading the note, and tucked the paper away in his pocket. Bullet Giver, Reply

The Germans got their real reply the next time a boche poked his head up. It was in the form of a bullet.

They are telling in some quarters that Whittlesey's reply to the demand for his surrender was "Go to hell!" Whittlesey says he did not say it, but that it covered his thoughts at the time, anyway.

Not all men in his command are New Yorkers. Some time ago the

they were expected to hold the position at all hazards.

The announcement was received with grim nods.

Time and time again the best men in the command were picked and sent out as runners, in the hope they might get through the German lines.

Of nine men thus sent out, four were killed, four wounded, and the ninth was captured. It was this man who was sent back by the Germans with the note demanding surrender.

He was taken before the German commander and closely interrogated, but declined to give any information whatsoever. The German commander mentioned this fact in the note to Whittlesey. Then the American was blindfolded and given the message.

The Argonne forest in which the Seventy-seventh Division is fighting is a maze of trees. They are not big trees, but stand close together like stalks in a wheat field. Woven through them in the undergrowth are vines.

It is impossible for a man to walk through the woods straight for any distance in any direction. It is impossible even to see through them to any great depth.

It is said the French lost 60,000 men trying to take these woods since the outbreak of the war. The Germans must have lost many more in holding them.

Trapped In Forest

It was in a particularly deep section of this modern wilderness that the little command of New Yorkers was trapped. Before the war Central Park probably was the largest forest ever seen by most of these men.

About forty men were killed as they lay there. The fellows buried their dead as best they could, usually under fire. Barely did the Germans cease wounding them with shell. Miners came through the trees in bunches.

The wounded men were given the best attention possible. In his note demanding surrender the German commander appealed to Whittlesey on the ground of humanity, saying the Germans could hear the cries of the American wounded.

The soldiers say that as a matter of fact our men were peculiarly stoical and made little outcry, while, on the other hand, they could hear Germans squalling in the woods after every volley.

In a couple of days Whittlesey's men had exhausted every vestige of food. Cold rain came on and drenched them day and night. Only a few of them had their overcoats. It gets bitter in the Argonne wood at night, whatever the season of the year.

They could get little sleep on account of the terrible din of the gun fire. They say they never saw any sign of food. Other supplies were dropped into the woods by American airplanes. Neither did they ever find the box of carrier pigeons flung into the trees from aloft.

The rain soon made bog walls out of their little trenches. They couldn't get warm and began to suffer intensely from the exposure and lack of food. Some of them were very weak when they reached the rear at last.

But the men came out of that hellish wood singing the praises of their officers, especially of Whittlesey.

"You are certainly a great anchor man for the division," said the general commanding that front to the New Yorker. "You held on where you were caught!"

Whittlesey merely smiled his funny little smile.

The battalions were sent back for rest. As soon as they have got warmed up and washed up they will be back in the line. They are less excited about their amazing exploit than any one else in the army, that speculated on nothing else for days but their probable fate.

Finance And Money Market

We have to report a very quiet week, with but few bills offering and no demand for remittance. Tails remittance rate on Shanghai rose on the Chinese market from 96.6 to 96.75, and closed with some demand for T.T.

Dollars rose from 70.45 buyers and 70.35 sellers Chinese market to 70.35 and 70.55 with easy money. Interest is easier at 12 percent. Changsha exchange fell from 34 to 32.

Exports: We have no change to report from this market. Business remains very much under the influence of political conditions, which have imparted extreme uncertainty to the situation. Furthermore, exporters are experiencing difficulty owing to the stringency of the money market, which seems likely to handicap business severely in the near future. Some small purchases of Hides, Gallnuts and Sesamum Seed are reported, while prices for Wood Oil and Cotton have further declined.

Imports: There has been slightly more inquiry in this market for Native Yarn and Cloth. A few lines have been booked. Clearances have also shown an improvement as a result of the easier native money market.

Washington's Ball To Be Held Next Year

American Co. Will Give Big Dance For First Time
Since 1914

The Washington's Ball, one of the brightest annual social events of the American community in previous years, will be given again next February by the American Company, S.V.C., for the first time since the year of the beginning of the war.

Decision to hold the ball next year was arrived at by the American Company at a meeting held yesterday in the United States courtrooms and committees will be appointed by Captain Ransom in the near future to set about the arrangements. Attendance at the affair will be by invitation and tickets will be $10 a couple. The ball will be held in the Town Hall.

Other business of the meeting included the appropriation of $200 for the organization of an American troop of Boy Scouts. The troop will be affiliated with the national organization and the appropriation will enable its formation without delay.

News Briefs

Japanese papers record the death from pneumonia of Mr. H. L. Chapin of the Standard Oil Company of New York in Kobe, who passed away November 26. Mr. Chapin was one of the young men especially trained by the company for its foreign service and had only arrived in Japan in March last year. He was in charge of the lubricating oil department of the Kobe office.

Invitations are out for the forthcoming wedding of Miss Flora Elias, the eldest daughter of Mr. R. H. Elias, to Mr. Ellis Hayim. The marriage is to be solemnized on Sunday, December 22, at 4 p.m. at the residence of the bride's father, "Irene Lodge," 8 Seymour Road.

Demonstration of the work that is being done with the Chinese blind will be made by Mr. George B. Fryer, director of the Institute for the Chinese Blind at a lecture to be given by him at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. this evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Fryer will bring with him a group of blind boys from his institute and will illustrate his lecture with moving pictures and lantern slides. The lecture will be open to the public.

"Touches of Life in China" will be the topic of a lecture to be given before the Royal Asiatic Society, 5 Museum Road, tomorrow by Dr. W. L. Hall. The lecture will begin at 8:30 p.m. and the meeting is open to the public.

Six armed men entered a house at 322 North Shantung Road shortly before 6 o'clock last evening, held up the inmates, ransacked the place and escaped with money and jewelry to the amount of about $1,100. During the robbery four shots were fired but no one was hit.

Semenoff Again Stormy Petrel

The official showed the order to his chief whose comment was true Semenov: "I am master of the Balkans and you are a slave from me." The Admiral's train arrived and the Admiral sat on the train for two hours. But there was no sign of a visitor or any reports. But Semenov's train was on the tracks and after two hours, the Admiral went down the tracks to call on the Cosack leader. But the call was not a success and the Allies were many busy days trying to patch up the rift.

In time Semenov gave in and came to Harbin. One officer describes him as arriving like a desert cyclone, a short train about twenty-five Cosacks and some machine-guns. He was in a conciliatory mood but he seldom called without machine-guns. It was a habit. As fate would have it, there was a strike on the Chinese Eastern Railway controlled by General Horvath. Semenov got traveling accommodations by impressing a train crew whom he promised to shoot if they did not land him in Harbin at a certain hour. The crew fell to like Trojans—or men under fear of Semenov—and brought him in on time, but it was a race. Arrived in Harbin with his twenty-five Cosacks, he was informed that a general strike all over the city was scheduled for the next day at eleven o'clock. And then Semenov did the Semenovian thing. With his twenty-five Cosacks he held up Harbin, an international city, with a hundred thousand inhabitants, several anxious foreign consuls and the troops of the then supposed government. He trained his machine-guns on the station and promised that he would shoot the first man who left work. No one left. Semenov sat in his car playing with a white rabbit. For two weeks, he vibrated between the cafes chantants and serious political discussions. In the meantime, however, very unfortunately his front caved in to the Bolsheviks and Japanese help became imperative. It was, nevertheless, a test of power which had its significance. Admiral Kolchak left soon after for Japan and has only now returned. General Horvath and the Minister of War, Ivanov-Rinov, have welcomed him with fervor, announced their allegiance and Ivanov-Rinov has proclaimed martial law, under which no criticism of the new Ministerium is permitted. But the Cosack Adamant—that is another story. The Man of Power has not yet finished what he began to say in the Spring. With the Cosacks backing Semenov and the troops of the government it is to be presumed promising loyalty to the Kolchak group, Siberia may stage another drama.
